CBI-electric: African Cables Founded in 1935, CBI-electric: African Cables manufactures a wide range of electric power cables for mining, utilities, and industrial applications at its Vereeniging factory. The company also operates Power Installations, South Africa's leading specialist in medium- and high-voltage cable installations, offering turnkey solutions with ISO 9001 certification and a 9EP CIDB rating. Their services cover electrical power, telecommunications, and fibre optics, with a focus on safety, quality, and technological advancement . Aberdare Cables Established in 1946, Aberdare Cables is a major supplier of energy interconnection products and services. It operates three manufacturing sites in South Africa—Pietermaritzburg, Gqeberha, and Gauteng—along with customer service centers in each province and in Maputo, Mozambique. Aberdare provides cable design, product development, installation support, commissioning, and diagnostic testing. Since its acquisition by Hengtong in 2016, the company has expanded its workforce and created learnership and trainee positions to support local economic growth . Cable Mack Cable Mack is one of South Africa's largest independent cable distributors, founded in 2004. It maintains two major distribution centers with over R500 million in stock, covering power, mining, solar, welding, and fibre optic cables. The company provides nationwide delivery from Johannesburg and Cape Town, in-house cutting facilities, and technical guidance on specifications and compliance. Cable Mack emphasizes transformation, inclusion, and skills development, serving major infrastructure projects across Southern Africa . Other Notable Companies
