Factors Affecting Cost

- Material: Pre-galvanised steel is standard, while hot-dipped galvanised (HDG) steel offers higher corrosion resistance and costs more .
- Width and Length: Wider trays (e.g., 300mm or 12-inch) and longer sections increase the price .

- Accessories: Couplers, bends, tees, and cover clips are sold separately and can add £5–£20 per piece depending on type .
 - Duty Rating: Higher load-bearing trays require thicker steel and reinforcement, increasing cost .
 - Supplier and Delivery: Prices may vary slightly between suppliers, and some offer trade discounts or bulk pricing .
- Buying Tips
- Check if the supplier offers custom cutting to reduce waste and cost .
 - Consider delivery times and whether collection is available locally .
 - Ensure the tray meets British Standards and is compatible with your installation system, especially for industrial or outdoor use . By selecting the appropriate duty rating, material, and accessories, you can plan a cost-effective cable management system for your project in the UK.
